Southwest Association for Language Learning Technology

SWALLT

SWALLT is a regional group of the International Association for Language Learning Technology (IALLT) encompassing Arizona, California, Hawaii, Nevada, and Utah.

“SWALLT is a volunteer organization dedicated to assisting those involved with any area of language learning and the use of technology.

Many of our members supervise language or computer labs in addition to language teaching duties. Others of us provide technical support or are engaged in the development of technology-based language products.

In a field where rapid change is the norm, it is important to have a resource to help with the constant questions technology brings. The members of SWALLT attempt to provide this resource to those who often find themselves being asked to manage and understand a growing number of technological products. We do this through semi-annual meetings, an electronic forum (SWALLT-L), a newsletter, conferences and personal contact.

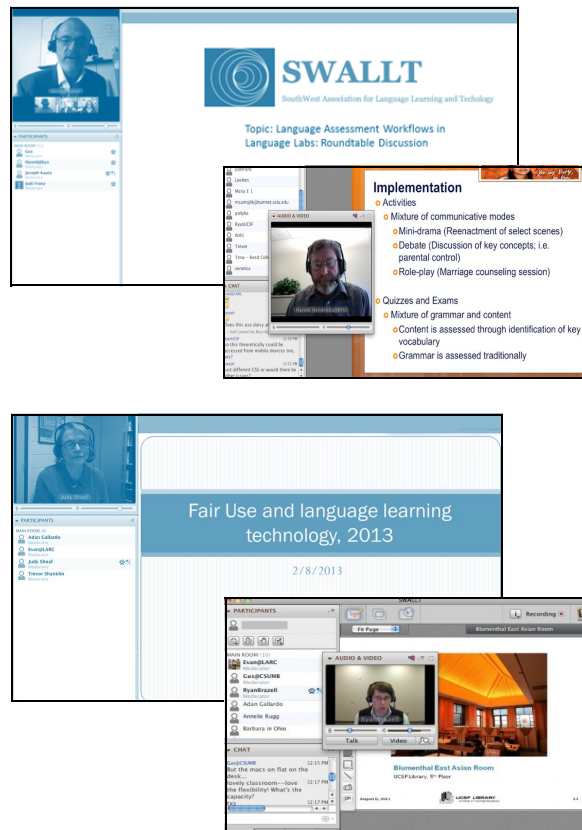

I invite you to join with us and help make a stronger organization by sharing your experience and questions with, what I believe to be, a very friendly and helpful group of colleagues.”

— Gus Leonard, CSUMB Language Laboratory Coordinator and past SWALLT president

SWALLT Online

SWALLT Online is a monthly web conference given by professionals in the field of language learning technology for the benefit of SWALLT members. These web “miniconferences” allow for detailed views on exciting projects and the latest innovations in the field and are always accompanied by informal but rigorous discussion.

Currently SWALLT Online is member benefit. Members receive a link for the upcoming talks via the SWALLT listserv. The Language Acquisition Resource Center (LARC) provides the technical platform for these webcasts.
